What problem or need does your community impact plan seek to address? Please include any relevant data.

The Sample Dispensary/Greater Hudson Promise Neighborhood (GHPN) partnership addresses the harm that arrest and incarceration, driven in large part by drug enforcement that fell hardest on Black and Latino New Yorkers, inflicts on children and families in the City of Hudson and Columbia County.

Hudson's poverty rate is 28.2 percent, more than double Columbia County's 12.1 percent, and its median household income of $54,139 trails both the county ($81,528) and New York State ($85,974) (U.S. Census Bureau, American Community Survey 2020–2024). These disparities have deep roots. In the late 1960s and early 1970s, urban renewal cleared more than 50 acres near Hudson's waterfront and displaced more than 200 families, nearly one in ten residents. Decades of cannabis prohibition compounded that harm: statewide, more than 80 percent of people arrested for marijuana possession were Black or Latino.

When a parent is arrested or incarcerated, children can lose contact with a caregiver while their family absorbs new financial and emotional strain. Since August 2016, the Columbia County Jail has offered full-contact, child-friendly enhanced visits, launched by the Greater Hudson Initiative for Children of Incarcerated Parents (GHICIP) with the Columbia County Sheriff's Office and GHPN; GHPN staff facilitate the visits, and in August 2022 GHPN added facilitated virtual visits. The program helped introduce an Enhanced Child Visiting policy at the jail. Through Safeguarding Children of Arrested Parents, GHPN partnered with the Mayor's Office, the Hudson Police Department, and the Osborne Association to train officers in trauma-informed, child-sensitive arrest practices, and its Community Court Advocacy Program provides direct service, assistance, and advocacy for justice-impacted residents, with a team that includes staff with lived experience. In 2025, in-person enhanced visits expanded to six times a week, the court advocacy program assisted eight justice-impacted youth and three adults, and GHPN presented the visiting program to administrators from another New York county jail seeking to learn about and potentially replicate it.

Greater Hudson Promise Neighborhood (GHPN) has served Hudson since 2011, when it was selected as one of fifteen communities nationwide for a U.S. Department of Education Promise Neighborhood planning grant. Modeled on the Harlem Children's Zone, GHPN is a place-based, cradle-to-career organization headquartered at 364 Warren Street in Hudson, serving children and families from birth through adulthood. The Sample Dispensary–GHPN partnership will sustain and expand these services, keeping children connected to their parents, reducing the collateral harm of arrest and incarceration, and supporting justice-impacted adults as they rebuild stability.

Who are the communities and individuals disproportionately impacted you intend to target?

The targeted population is children and families of incarcerated and justice-involved parents in the City of Hudson and Columbia County, and youth and adults navigating the court system and reentry. These families have been disproportionately impacted by drug enforcement, poverty, and systemic oppression. GHPN's mission is to build an equitable community by providing opportunities and support to individuals and families affected by systemic oppression and failures. Across all GHPN programs, 79 percent of participants are BIPOC.

Goals

1) Keep Children Connected to Incarcerated Parents. Provide enhanced, child-friendly in-person visits and facilitated virtual visits at the Columbia County Jail, so children can maintain their relationships with incarcerated parents. Measured by families served and visits completed (August 2016–August 2025: 90+ families and 750+ enhanced visits, 87 percent in person).
2) Protect Children at the Point of a Parent's Arrest. Train law enforcement and service providers in practices that reduce trauma for children when a parent is arrested, in partnership with the Hudson Police Department and the Osborne Association. Measured by the number of officers and providers trained (2022: 25 Hudson Police Department officers, plus 16 individuals from 6 youth-serving organizations).
3) Support Justice-Impacted Youth and Adults Through Court and Reentry. Provide direct service, assistance, and advocacy for justice-impacted residents navigating court and reentry through GHPN's Community Court Advocacy Program, whose team includes staff with lived experience. Measured by the number of youth and adults supported and the services provided (2025: 8 justice-impacted youth and 3 adults assisted, with services including mentorship, emergency assistance, mindfulness coaching, Transformative Community Service, and Beyond GED enrollment).

Partnership Commitment

Sample Dispensary commits $5,000 per year to Greater Hudson Promise Neighborhood to support GHPN's programs for families impacted by incarceration, including its work with the Greater Hudson Initiative for Children of Incarcerated Parents and its Community Court Advocacy Program, for a term of 2 years, beginning November 1, 2026. Total commitment over the term: $10,000.

The Year 1 contribution is made upon signing this pledge; the Year 2 contribution is due on the one-year anniversary.

Funds support enhanced, child-friendly visits at the Columbia County Jail, facilitated virtual visits, training for police and providers on protecting children at a parent's arrest, and court and reentry support for justice-impacted residents.

How will you measure your program's success? Please describe both the qualitative and quantitative metrics you plan to use and how you'll gather this information.

Qualitative

Qualitative success will be measured through family surveys, participant interviews, and feedback from partners including the Columbia County Sheriff's Office and the Hudson Police Department.

In program surveys, incarcerated parents participating in enhanced visiting reported improved behavior and fewer disciplinary issues, and children reported reduced anxiety about their parent's well-being and feeling more connected to their incarcerated parent. GHPN's court advocacy team, which includes staff with lived experience of the justice system, builds trusted relationships that help participants navigate court and reentry with dignity.

These measures, together with ongoing staff contact, show whether children remain connected to their parents and whether justice-impacted adults are gaining stability.

Quantitative

Success will be measured through clear, quantitative outcomes for children and families impacted by incarceration, tracked by GHPN staff and reported in GHPN's annual impact summary.

Enhanced Visiting

August 2016–August 2025:

- 90+ families served
- 750+ enhanced visits at the Columbia County Jail
- 87 percent of visits held in person

In 2025, in-person enhanced visits expanded to six times a week, with virtual visits available for families facing distance barriers. Tracking includes families enrolled, visits completed (in person and virtual), and family survey results.

Training and Systems Change

In 2022:

- 25 Hudson Police Department officers completed a full-day training in trauma-informed, child-sensitive arrest practices

- 16 individuals from 6 youth-serving organizations completed the training
- 33 facilitated virtual visits after the August 2022 pilot launch

The program helped introduce an Enhanced Child Visiting policy at the Columbia County Jail. In November 2025, GHPN presented the program to administrators from another New York county jail and staff from several judicial districts seeking to learn about and potentially replicate it.

Court Advocacy and Reentry

In 2025:

- 8 justice-impacted youth and 3 adults assisted
- Services included direct mentorship, emergency assistance, mindfulness coaching, Transformative Community Service, and Beyond GED enrollment

GHPN tracks individuals supported, services provided, referrals completed, and reentry outcomes such as housing and employment.

Overall Performance Indicators

Program success will continue to be measured through:

- Families and children served
- Visits completed
- Officers and providers trained
- Justice-impacted adults supported
- Family and participant satisfaction

Reporting and Accountability

GHPN will provide Sample Dispensary with an annual impact summary covering the metrics above, along with acknowledgment of contributions received. Sample Dispensary will retain these records, together with proof of each contribution, to document plan implementation at license renewal.
